Well, I've always loved sport. I've played volleyball and tennis since I was at primary school, and I've been running for about six years. I usually do four or five miles every morning before school. Then, last year my little cousin had a serious accident – a car knocked him down when he was on his bike – and he spent about two months in hospital. While I was visiting him there, I realized just how important hospitals and our doctors and nurses are, so I decided to do something to help.

I've taken part in lots of charity events with my mum so I know how to organize things. I love running and so do lots of my friends. So a good idea was to have a charity run for the local children hospital. We're calling it Running for Life. It's going to be a half marathon and we are doing it next April in Hardwick Park. So far, 60 people have signed up but I've been telling everyone I meet about the event so I hope lots more people will take part! I've been training really hard for the event and I've already done two half marathons, so I think I'm ready! We are hoping to raise about £10,000 – I've already got £200 in sponsorship so things are looking good!

1. Nadiya's relative was injured on the road. _____
2. She is respectful of doctors and nurses. _____
3. She hasn't participated in any charity events before. _____
4. Her mum shares her idea of helping people. _____
5. Running for Life was held last spring. _____
6. Nadiya's has done the charity runs twice so far. _____
7. She has already raised a thousand pounds. _____
8. The girl is upset that not many people have decided to sign up for the event. _____
