Cold monkeys

A group of monkeys at a special center in Wales had to get under blankets after their expensive heater broke in winter. The owner of the center said the heater didn't work for two days. Because it was during the winter holidays, she couldn't find anyone to fix it. The workers at the center had to find ways to keep the monkeys warm.

Monkeys don't like cold weather. The places where they live in Africa are much warmer than Wales. During the cold nights monkeys wore a lot of blankets, but they didn't like that at all. Only one of them, called Nakima, loves blankets and wears them all the time. Luckily, there are a lot of different blankets in the center because people give them for the cute animals. The monkeys usually eat fruit, but during those cold days they ate warm cooked potatoes and drank hot tea.

For the owners (Jan and Graham) it was a difficult time. They didn't sleep, because they had to make sure all the animals were warm enough and didn't get sick.
